New spaces, familiar smiles, and the beginning of belonging

The first few days at Kidnovate Summer Camp have been all about gentle transitions and warm beginnings. Children are slowly settling into a new space, recognising friendly faces, and building simple routines together. From exploring cozy corners to sharing snack time and calling out each other’s names, each moment is helping them feel a little more at ease and at home. There have been moments of quiet observation, playful movement, and joyful dance—bringing comfort and connection into their day.

Where stories come alive, and little imaginations begin to wander and wonder.

Stories have been at the heart of our journey, opening up a world of imagination and connection. Through stories like Charlie’s Boat, The Colour Monster, Three Little Kittens, and The Tickly Octopus, children explored friendship, feelings, and new ideas. They expressed themselves through painting, creating simple puppets and moving figures, building pathways, and spending time with books—turning pages, noticing details, and enjoying the magic within.
